The Uttar Pradesh Tourism department is collaborating with the Draupadi Dream Trust to bring her home town Kampilya in the tourism map of the state.

Neera Misra, a resident of that area who has been doing extensive research on Draupadi for the past several years, says that they have already sent a proposal to the UP Tourism Department for the formation of Kampliya-Sankisa Heritage Development Board for its development.

A senior official in the Tourism department told 'The Pioneer' that the proposal had been sent to various government departments for NOC (no objection certificate).

"After receiving the NOC from the various departments, the proposal will be sent for the approval of the state Cabinet," he added. Misra, who mooted the project, said it was necessary to highlight Draupadi as she was the first iconic woman who spoke against the prevalent traditions and was a great
